Strowing a decrease alnce last year amounting to $273,452.

There has been rather less activity in the dry goods business during the week, as purchasers have bought only small quantities of desirable articles, which they were most in need of. The receipts of goods have, how ever, been moderate, and the stocks have not accu nu lated Hence, prices have generally been sustained, though in the case of unseasonable or unpopular articles considerable irregularity in value is discernible. This is no new teature, and is not apt to desappear for some time or until holders get rid of a large portion, if not the whole, of the supply of such goods now on their hands.

A pretty active inquiry exists for choice makes of brown and bleached sheetings and shirtings at full rates. Cotton flannels and cotton jeans, of select styles, arranleable and firm. Denims are in fair supply and request while drills are quiet, yet steady, at old quotations. Most kinds of d ck are offered with greater freedom at rather easier prices, but the demand is not increasing. Singba ms are a fittle brisker, though not dearer. Lawss and narkins remain as previously reported. Osnaburgs are rather more sought after, at former figures. The stock is not accumulating. Printing cloths are still inactive, yet pretty stifly held. French styles of prints are moderately dealt in, and rule firm. Stripes and ticks are plenty and heavy, exhibiting, if anything, a downward tend mey.

Weellen productions are stracting more attention, but are not increasing in value. The little demand that exists is freely met by owners at old rales, though these hardly cover the prime cost of goods, even in the case of the choicest fabrics. Blankets are taken in lote as wanted, at steady prices. Fancy cassimeres and low priced cloths are more inquired for, but are rather lower. Doeshins and finnels are unchanged in demand and value. Jeans and linseys rule quiet and languid, buyers having the advantage is most transactions. Mouslin de laines continue in fair request, without alteratio

Satinets are selling pretty freely, and are steady Sheep's grays and shawle continue as before reported Tweeds are inactive and drooping. The supply is in
